GRA Threatens Strike Action

The Government plans to enter talks with the Garda Representative Association (GRA) amidst threats by the police force to withdraw their services in industrial action next month.

Under s.59 of the Garda Síochána Act (2005), it is stated

“A person is guilty of an offence if he or she induces, or does any act calculated to induce, any member of the Garda Síochána to withhold his or her services or to commit a breach of discipline.”

However, Gardaí have said that they will withdraw services on four separate days (4, 11, 18 and 25 of November) if an agreement for pay is not met.

A pay deal that included rent allowance for new recruits, backdated increments and an extra 15 hours work per year was rejected last week; this was followed by a ballot on industrial action. The Government have ruled out unilateral pay restoration, as it would mean increased pay for all public sector workers.

According to the Sunday Business Post:

“The GRA has said members are seeking the full restoration of pay cuts implemented since 2008, as well as the reversal of deferred increments and no extra hours.”

Despite the illegality of the proposed industrial action, the Government have yet to take any legal steps to halt such work stoppages.

Abhaile Advice Service Launched

This afternoon, Minister for Social Protection Leo Varadkar TD and An Tánaiste Frances Fitzgerald TD will launch a financial and legal advice service called Abhaile.

The service, aimed at those in mortgage distress or struggling with debt, will provide legal advice and support. The service will be independent. Its main goal will be keeping people in their homes. A pilot of the scheme was launched in early 2016, and has seen largely positive results.

Although recent Central Bank figures show that the number of cases of houses in mortgage arrears are steady in decline, many households are still weighed down by massive debt.

A similar scheme was launched in late 2012 by then-Minister for Social Protection Joan Burton TD. However, the number of people who availed of the scheme was incredibly low. By the end of 2014, only 1,207 distressed borrowers had made use of the service.

The scheme will be launched today, Monday 3 October, at 12.30pm; the launch will take place in the Pearse Street Library.
Dáil Debates on “high priority” Sex Crimes Bill to Start

This Wednesday 5 and Thursday 6, the Dáil will discuss the Criminal Law (Sexual Offences) Bill 2015. The Bill, which was first published on 23 September 2015, reaches its second stage this week in the upper house.

The Bill gives effect to Directive No. 2011/93/ EU of the European Parliament and of the Council of 13 December 2011. This directive is aimed at combating instances of child sexual abuse and child pornography. Within, the Bill provides for the collection of evidence in sex crime cases, especially where evidence is being collected from children.

It also lays out stipulations regarding statutory rape, including harsher sentences for adults who participate in sex acts with a minor over whom they have authority.

New measures also protect children from grooming acts, and online predators. Provisions in the Act also criminalise the purchase of sexual services, where previously only the sale of such was criminalised.

This comes shortly after the Minister for Justice Francis Fitzgerald TD showed concern over the increase in sex crimes over the 12 months up until June this year. The increase of 13% was in stark contrast to the drop in crime figures across most of the other categories.

Minister Fitzgerald said,

“It is clear that we as a society cannot tolerate such crimes. More needs to be done and I am determined to meet this challenge head on.”

She also noted that this week’s discussions of the Bill in the Dáil were of high priority.

DSP Refutes Claims Made by Media

Last week, an Irish Times article reported that, according to the Comptroller and Auditor General’s report for 2015, that

“the Department of Social Protection estimates the cost of the [Public Service Card] scheme will reach €60 million by the end of 2017”.

The article also reported that the Department

“failed to develop a business case for the rolling out of the Public Service Card and there is no evidence it carried out a comprehensive risk evaluation of the project”.

However, in a statement made on Friday 30 September, the DSP countered this claim. The statement gives the actual figure of the increase. According to the DSP, the cost for the provision of the cards to qualified recipients will increase. For the “Managed Services Contract element of the project” from €24.9m in 2012 to €27.6m at the end of 2017. The scheme, over the course of its running will increase its figure from €55.3m in 2012 to €59.7m at the end of 2017.

The statement denotes that staffing levels were increased from those projected at the planning stage. It also comments that the scheme also yields costs savings in protecting against welfare fraud.
